Nikki Haley

Fmr. U.S. Ambassador to the U.N.

Fmr. Governor of S.C.

Friday, November 19, 2021

Nikki Haley served as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations from 2017–2018 in the administration of U.S. President Donald Trump. Prior to that, she was the first female and first minority to serve as governor of South Carolina from 2011–2017.

Haley's parents are Indian immigrants who started a family business out of the living room of their home and transformed it into a multimillion-dollar company. She began working there while still a teenager, and, after studying accounting at Clemson University (B.S., 1994), she returned as its CFO. In 2004, Haley won a seat in the state House of Representatives from South Carolina.

In 2010, Haley ran for governor of South Carolina. During her first term, South Carolina's economy grew steadily as the jobless rate fell. Haley easily won reelection in 2014.

In 2016, she was selected to give the Republican party's response to U.S. President Barack Obama's State of the Union address. In November 2016, President-elect Trump selected her to serve as the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. She was easily confirmed by the U.S. Senate in January 2017 with a vote of 96 to 4.

As U.N. ambassador, Haley developed a reputation for being outspoken, especially concerning Iran and North Korea, both of which were pursuing nuclear programs. In 2018, she supported Trump's decision to withdraw from the 2015 nuclear deal with Iran. Haley ensured the American people saw value for their investment at the U.N. – introducing reforms that made the organization more efficient, transparent, and accountable. In a two-year period, she negotiated over $1.3 billion in savings, including making U.N. peacekeeping missions more effective and targeted, while improving their ability to protect civilians.

In the U.N. Security Council, Ambassador Haley worked to defend Americans' interests and keep our country safe. She spearheaded negotiations resulting in the strongest set of sanctions ever placed on North Korea for its nuclear weapons program. As U.N. Ambassador, Haley championed human rights.

She challenged human rights violators across the globe, standing up to oppressive regimes in Iran, Syria, Venezuela, Cuba, and Russia

Haley authored two autobiographies “Can’t Is Not an Option: My American Story” and “With All Due Respect: Defending America with Grit and Grace”. She and her husband Michael Haley, a combat veteran, have two children.
